I had the chance of a useful discussion with Bob Rice at Louisville and this brought me up-to-date on his work.

Once again, may I thank you most sincerely for all your kindnesses during my visit. Please give my best regards to Marion.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Leo,

Now that I have completed my trip and am back once more in England, I should like to thank you most sincerely for the very worthwhile visit I paid to Montreal and for the discussions I had with you and Bob. Bob will have told you of the seminar which we had in Louisville and which proved to be so very valuable. It was the hope of all concerned that this might be a regular feature when members of the three laboratories are together in any one place. Certainly, I found it up-dated and very rapidly with regard to the different lines of attack being adopted at the three places. I am sure that Bob shares this opinion and no doubt will have so told you.

As soon as I have my head above water, I will send you the copies of papers we have available, dealing with ionization and its effects. I expect that Bob will already have passed on to you the Emerson brochure which I picked up at their showrooms in New York. It seems that ions and their effect on personal well-being is already a commercial selling point.

I am sorry that my stay in Montreal was necessarily curtailed by the need to visit T.I.R.C. (where, incidentally, everything went very well) but, thanks to your very willing co-operation and the help which Bob gave, I think I gathered all the salient points.
